BLOODSTAINS MADE BY EDWARDS'S PREPER

WALL NOT SMEARED BLOOD MAN, SAYS EG- GERS, REGARDING NEW HAVEN MYSTERY.

By William J. Eggers.

Detective Investigating Edwards' Mystery in Death of Mrs. Edwards.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Jan. 10.—I have reason to believe that the bloodstains on the wall of the lower subway of the Hiller house, which, according to Governor Hilditch, were made by Mr. Edwards in his last moments as he fled from the shooting at the door of the kitchen, leading into the backyard, were, in reality, made by the murderer himself.

It is further that a microscopic examination of these stains will reveal beyond a doubt the fact that these stains were made with this type of the finger, and that because they contain a damp print, which is one of the important features of the Bertillon system.

Stains from Finger Tips.

There is no doubt in my mind now that such an examination will be made, for Governor Hilditch cannot overlook the most important avenue of investigation which the stains open up.

From that microscopic examination of these stains which I have been able to make I am convinced that the stains were never made with the tip of the hand.

ROGERS' DEATH STIRS MORE AGAINST CHAR

Lynn Man's Bill Submits Capital Penalty to the Referendum.

HOPES TO SAVE TUCKER

His feelings moved by the recent hanging of Mary Rogers in Vermont, William R. Rogers of Lynn has moved to introduce in the Legislature a bill to amend the constitution on the question of abolishing capital punishment in this State. The author hopes that this measure may save Charles E. Tucker from the electric chair, pending the case of the State on the question of the death penalty.

Mr. Rogers' bill is a measure to amend the constitution on the question of abolishing capital punishment in this State. The author hopes that this measure may save Charles E. Tucker from the electric chair, pending the case of the State on the question of the death penalty.

SEEK SOME OF PROBE OF FAILURE

Where is Charles D. Grier?

That is the question asked by all those interested in the investigation of the affairs of the Provident Savings and Bank company, the recent failure of which has lost to many poor people of Boston and vicinity all their savings of years.

The authorities wish to see Mr. Grier and see if they can save some portion of the assets of the company, the recent failure of which is believed to be in the hands of Mr. Grier. It is believed that if he were so inclined Mr. Grier might aid the authorities in recovering some of the assets of the company.

CHARLES L. TUCKER

Advocate of Mary J. Cooper.

I, Mary J. Cooper, wife of Charles L. Tucker, do hereby certify that I am the wife of Charles L. Tucker, and that I am the mother of the child who was born to me on Jan. 10, 1906. I am a resident of the city of Boston, and I am a member of the St. Alphonsus Association.

Maine Girl Declares, in First Official Statement, That Tucker Was Pleasant and Lighthearted; and Showed No Indication of Nervousness.

Mabel Walker-Grundy, the pretty Maine girl, who knew Charles Louis Tucker, stands between him and the death chair.

This young woman, who was Miss Mabel Walker at the time Mabel Page was brutally stabbed to death on March 31, 1904, is now Mrs. Grundy. On the afternoon of the day the murder was committed, from about 1 o'clock until 3, Miss Walker was in the company of Tucker. While she cannot prove an alibi for Tucker, her testimony is of such a nature that it serves to dissipate the probability that he ever did the shocking deed.

Girl's Sworn Statement.

Following is the sworn statement of Mabel Walker-Grundy, telling about this critical period in the life of Tucker:

Known all men by these presents that I, Mabel E. Walker of Damariscotta in the State of Maine, on this day depose and say that I am twenty years of age, that I live with my aunt, Mrs. J. T. Gamage of Damariscotta in the State of Maine; that on the 21st of March, A. D. 1904, I was visiting with my grand aunt, Mrs. Jeremiah Woodard at Auburnville in the city of Newton, Massachusetts; that at about 1 o'clock in the afternoon of that day I met Charles L. Tucker at or near the Weston bridge in said Auburnville; that he was a young man named Henry Bourne; that I was then riding in a wagon with Arthur Woodard, that Tucker and Bourne got on the wagon and rode with us; that I afterward went walking with said Tucker; that I was constantly with him from about 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon of that day until about 3 o'clock in the afternoon; that he was dressed in a dark overcoat and a dark suit of clothes and a dark derby hat; that I cannot describe accurately his clothes, that I saw him about 11 o'clock and was with him about an hour; that he looked and acted in about the same way that he did on the previous Thursday when I saw him; and that he was dressed in about the same way.

Would Have Seen Tucker.

Following is the affidavit of Mary J. Cooper, which declares that Tucker could not have passed up South street to the scene of the crime, because he was there at the time.

COMMONWEALTH vs. CHARLES L. TUCKER.

Advocate of Mary J. Cooper.

I, Mary J. Cooper, wife of Charles L. Tucker, do hereby certify that I am the wife of Charles L. Tucker, and that I am the mother of the child who was born to me on Jan. 10, 1906. I am a resident of the city of Boston, and I am a member of the St. Alphonsus Association.

DEW MADE FORTUNES OUT OF SCHEMES, SAY POLICE

Records of Man and Half-Sister Held as Forgers Are Investigated.

As Lecturer, Inventor, Hypnotist and Writer, His Versatility Was Amazing.

The police are investigating the careers of John H. Dew and his half-sister, Mrs. Louise S. M. Hood, who are now in Charles Street Jail, awaiting trial on a charge of having and forging of certificates of stock valued at about $2,000. The sister, Mrs. Hood, is charged with the forgery of the certificates of the Boston & Maine Railroad Co. of No. 18 South Street, Brighton. Complaints have been received from more than thirty persons that a couple who were known to them as "Professor Kipper" and "Mrs. Hood" had been passing large sums of money from them. There are believed to be hundreds of others who have been similarly deceived. It is said that the couple were "very clever" and "very successful" in their work.

BERNHARDT AS "LA SORCIERE" TAKES AUDIENCE BY STORM

Brilliant Triumph at the Boston Theatre Pines House With Boundless Enthusiasm.

Great Actress, in Twelve Curtain Calls, Is Cheered to the Echo.

By Ernest L. Waite.
DIVINE SARAH's farewell in like a deluge.
With her long arms—arms that are as long as the moral law—extended straight out at each side and her body quivering with emotion, she responded to twelve curtain calls at the close of one of the acts of "La Sorciere."

She deserved every one of them, and they were honest praise. Enthusiasm was rampant. Men and women stood up in their seats and yelled "Bravo!" Men in the balcony shouted "Hey! Hey! Sarah!" and the entire audience joined in a spontaneous outburst.

Thus did Sarah Bernhardt, at the age of sixty-one, in the Boston Theatre on her farewell tour, take a triumph that qualified her as one of the great actors of the world. Her great success in "La Sorciere" was not only a triumph for her, but for the art of acting. It was, indeed, a personal triumph.

The spring bill for her two weeks' engagement was badly broken. "La Sorciere" had no interest in popular and Boston players have never returned to it. The audience was so great, however, that it was not as large as it might have been, but it was a triumph for the actress who was so long in coming to the United States.

Art Concoits Art.
Even more than ever does she make you forget that she is acting. Even more than ever does she make you forget that she is acting and that she is acting and that she is acting. This is her great art. This is her great art. This is her great art.

She is now able to discard the awkward and clumsy things which she used to wear. She is now able to discard the awkward and clumsy things which she used to wear. She is now able to discard the awkward and clumsy things which she used to wear.

Her perpetual youth is ever apparent. Her grace, vivacity, magnetism, power—all remain as fresh as ever. She actually does not look to be a day over thirty. The lines of her face are not broken. As she glided out of the stage, she was in a dark blue suit. She was in a dark blue suit. She was in a dark blue suit.

Her farewell was not only a triumph for her, but for the art of acting. It was, indeed, a personal triumph. Her farewell was not only a triumph for her, but for the art of acting. It was, indeed, a personal triumph.

One could hardly imagine a more perfect Cardinal Simon than that of St. Max. Two other characters in "La Sorciere" stand out boldly. They are characters which have to be born in a moment, and it is to come, sudden, before the eyes of the audience. They are characters which have to be born in a moment, and it is to come, sudden, before the eyes of the audience.

SOCIETY WAS THERE, BRILLIANT IN GAY, BEAUTIFUL GOWNS.
In dressing dress and with a demonstration, it was a typical French society which greeted Mrs. Bernhardt, such as might have been home to her in any Paris life.
It was the artistic rather than the strictly social element of Boston that was the most eager to greet her. It was the artistic rather than the strictly social element of Boston that was the most eager to greet her.

THE DIVINE SARAH.
ARTIST'S CONCEPTION OF THE DIVINE SARAH AS "THE SORCERESS."

over black with, with trimmings of maroon and white. Mrs. Bernhardt was in a dark blue suit. She was in a dark blue suit. She was in a dark blue suit.
